Production of Steel By U.S.S. At Peace Record

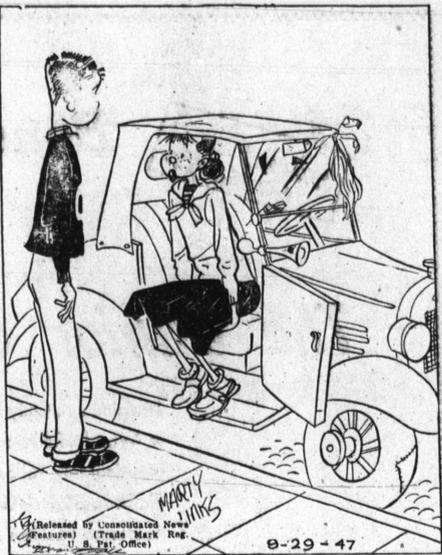

"The steel producing subsidiaries of United States Steel Corporation late last week poured their 50 millionth ton of steel since the end of hostilities in World War II," Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel, said Tuesday.

"Although our postwar production was limited by strikes during 1946 and 1947, these subsidiaries have never in times of peace produced such a tremendous tonnage of steel in the brief span of a little more than two years. This goal would have not been reached much earlier had it not been for several prolonged labor stoppages during the past two years.

"This achievement shows that U. S. Steel's efforts for maximum steel production have borne fruit. These efforts will continue without letup until the nation's needs have been adequately served. While a balance between production and demand for many steel products is not yet in sight, pent up needs are steadily being filled. Current steel production by these subsidiaries is well in excess of two million tons a month, and is bringing nearer the day when steel will be available in ample quantities for every need."

Sufficient Steel Supply Is Available

Pointing to an eventual satisfactory supply of steel for western industry, J. Lester Perry, president of Columbia Steel Company, a U. S. Steel subsidiary, recently told a meeting of the Purchasing Agents Association of Northern California that existing and newly announced western steel producing facilities, together with expanding facilities of the Gulf and eastern ports, should provide Pacific coast manufacturers with enough steel and keen competition for years to come.

Perry pointed out that prior to the war finished steel produced west of the Rocky Mountains amounted to nearly 900,000 tons and was confined to a comparatively narrow range of products. Since the war this annual capacity for finished steel has been increased to approximately 2,700,000 tons through building new steel mills and expanding existing plants. This, Perry said, will mean a much better balance in the supply of steel for both durable and consumer goods.

"An example of the present unequal distribution is to be seen in the fact that a substantial tonnage of western produced steel plates is being used to make pipelines to distribute gas throughout the west, to take care of the great industrial growth we are talking about. When these lines are completed, the new steel finishing facilities now being installed will turn to a greater proportion of consumer goods."

"It is very evident," Perry continued, "the expansion of western steel manufacturing that has already taken place, plus that which is planned, is much greater than the expansions over the nation as a whole or in any other single section of the country. This is further evidence of the cooperation which United States Steel Corporation and the industry as a whole is giving to the development and growth of western industry."

Rare Minerals On Exhibit

Rare and interesting specimens of minerals and emeralds from South American countries, collected by Warren R. Jones of Sierra Madre on a 16,000-mile trip, all but 1,000 of which was made in a jeep, will be exhibited at the Los Angeles County museum in Exposition park for one month starting Oct. 6.

The exhibit, according to the young mineralogist, will include what is believed to be the largest chunk of cassiterite, tin oxide, 350 pounds, ever found in one piece.

Other things in the collection will include specimens of vanadium ore from Minasragra, Peru, and specimens of copper minerals, cerium minerals and emeralds from the mines of Muzo, Colombia.

Eaker To Talk To Reservists

Maj. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, former deputy commander, Army Air Forces and chief of the air staff, will address a joint meeting of all reserve officer organizations, Army, Navy and National Guards, to be held at the Lakewood Country club in Long Beach Oct. 8, it was announced by the Council of Reserve Officer Associations, sponsor of the affair.

Gen. Eaker's subject will be "Plan for National Security." This is the first joint meeting of reserve officers to be held in Southern California.

Commodore Gene Markey, U.S. N.R., will act as master of ceremonies for the event, scheduled as an informal dinner, and a number of motion picture stars, closely associated with military activities during the war, and high-ranking military and naval officers will be special guests.

The Council of Reserve Officer Associations, the first organization of its kind in the country, was formed to coordinate the activities of the National Guard and all Army and Navy reserve officer groups in the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor area.

OIL CONSUMPTION

Fast driving is one of the most common causes of excessive oil consumption. At speeds of 55 miles an hour, the average car consumes one-third more oil than the amount it would use at 40 miles an hour.
